1. [] a series of maps [] illustrate the general plans for the reconstruction of Warsaw after the damages of World War II and [] the actual progress in this reconstruction through Dec 53. These maps are based on a close scrutiny of the daily Warsaw press of 1952 and 1953 and the special publications concerning Warsaw's reconstruction, and on information [] from Poles who have special knowledge of conditions in Warsaw.

[] All the information [] used from my overt sources []

2. "Part C of this map series comprises a detailed picture of the objects and construction works in the districts covering the Southern Part of the Central Area of the City of Warsaw. (The maps and reports for Part A and Part B, the overall plans for Warsaw's reconstruction and the description of the Northern Part of Central Warsaw, []

[] Part C consists of three maps with a detailed descriptive legend. The first map shows the Southern Part of the Central Area of the City of Warsaw as it was in 1959. The second map shows the same area as it is planned for 1955. The third map shows the communication axis of the section called 'Og Stanislawowska'. All three maps are prepared by the degree and are drawn to a scale of 1: 10,000 and are available at the CIA Map Library.

Background

3. "In contrast to the northern part of the Central Area of Warsaw, the southern part of the city's central area suffered relatively less destruction during World War II and also during or after the Warsaw uprising. Although a large number of houses and buildings, especially along Jerozolimskie Avenue and along Marsalkowska Street, were burned out, many of these houses were capable of being reconstructed.

4. "Within this described area fewer changes can be observed, including the communication system. What changes there are can be itemized as follows:

- a. The reconstruction of Marszałkowska Street between Unii Place and Jerozolimskie Avenue. The street was made wider and north of the pre-World War II Zbawiciela place, a second place was established called Konstytucji Place;
 - b. Parallel to Marszałkowska Street, one of the traditional communication arteries running from the south to the north, a by-pass was constructed now called Nowomarszałkowska street;
 - c. The so-called Os Stanisławowska was re-created. The first project of this communication axis was planned by the end of the 18th century. It had never materialized but has now become a reality and will run from the historical KS. Mazowieckich Palais through the NA Rozdrożu Place, Wyzwolenia Avenue (formerly the eastern segment of Sixth Sierpnia Street), Zbawiciela Place, Nowowiejska Street (the western segment of the Pre-World War II Sixth Sierpnia Street).
5. "These modifications in the communication system resulted in the disappearance of some pre-World War II streets, for example Natolińska or Służewska street. Other streets will be liquidated in parts such as Koszykowa Street.
 6. "By the realization of these communication changes, the character of this part of Warsaw was modified to a certain extent. Before World War II it was merely a residential area in the apartment-house style. Only on its eastern edge a representative-style district was located along Ujazdowskie (now Stalina) Avenue where besides the seats of the supreme governing authorities, the diplomatic quarter was also situated.
 7. "By the new plans the northern part of the described area between Jerozolimskie Avenue and Piekna Street will be reconverted into an administrative district. The main Economic Board, the State Economic Planning Commission, was moved to this location and around its building will be dispersed nearly all of the industrial and trade ministries. Ujazdowskie Avenue is to stay the representative and diplomatic district.
 8. "On the southern edge of the area being described, on the former airfield, a huge university center is now under construction. However, only part of this center will be completed within the present Six-Year Economic Plan. The construction of the second part is planned for the next period.
 9. "Another noteworthy change is the reconstruction of an area along the Wisła River into a large park, the so-called Park for Culture and Recreation. It will cover nearly all of the terrain between Third Maja Avenue in the north and Agrikola Street in the south. The slums that partly covered this terrain were nearly completely destroyed during World War II. Also several industrial enterprises such as the pre-World War II municipal gas works were not rebuilt after World War II. There are conflicting reports about the inclusion of the pre-World War II sporting grounds which before World War II belonged to the 'Legia' military club. Some reports say that the sporting grounds will be included in the Park for Culture and Recreation; other reports say that they have been included in the Sobieskiego Park for Warsaw's schools. It looks as though the pre-World War II cavalry barracks along Agrikola Street will also be included in the park area.
 10. "Industry which was represented here primarily by small enterprises, completely disappeared from this described area. For the time being some printing shops are still left, but it is said that this trade will also be moved to other places.
 11. "In addition, the military barracks also nearly completely vanished from this southern part of Warsaw. Up to this date [1954] one small barracks, which before World War II housed the horse-mounted artillery, is still occupied by a small military detachment. On Rakowiecka Street, the pre-World War II anti-aircraft artillery barracks are still provisionally occupied by the KGW (security system auxiliary military units) but both of these military complexes will be gone from the scene in line with plans. Also the seat of the Supreme Military Authorities is no longer located near Ujazdowskie Avenue. Some of these authorities are quartered in the pre-World War II officers' engineering school, the rest are in offices in other sections of the city.
- Legend
12. "The following legend applies to the two maps of the southern part of the central city area of Warsaw (1939 and 1955 versions): / indicates the installation appears only on the 1955 map.

Utilities
211	Railway station for suburban electrical line	J-2	On Nowogrodzka Street which connects the city center. The station is still on its pre-World War II location, but it is planned to move it from the center of the city to the Ochota suburb. This line which was operated before World War II by a British concern is now nationalized.
212	Station for small gauge suburban railway line	L-7	On Melwederska Street. By this line the southern suburban area is connected with Warsaw in the direction of Konstancin. Another station of this type of line which was on Fryzajska Street was transferred after World War II farther south to the Służewice suburb. The trains running toward Gora Kalwaria and Grojec are still operated from the Służewice station.
213	PKS station *	L-2	On the corner of Pulawska and Ursynowska streets. Station of the state-operated autobus line with connections to Grojec and Radom operated as long distance lines in the southern direction.
214	PKS station *	B-6	Of the state-operated autobus line on the corner of Opaczewska and Grojecka Streets, serves as a long distance autobus line in the southwestern direction.
215	Streetcar hangars	K-6	On their pre-World War II location on Pulawska Street. The new streetcar hangars which will be the main ones for the whole western part of the city are now under construction in the Służewice suburb on the corner of Wolowska and Woronicza streets. Completion is projected for the middle of 1955 at which time the Pulawska streetcar hangars will be liquidated. At present 30 streetcar lines are operating in Warsaw with 524 streetcars at the disposal of the municipal communication enterprise. In contrast to pre-World War II times, besides autobus lines, trolley communication was introduced in the center of the city. From several of the main streets, for example the so-called Trakt Starej Warszawy (Ujazdowskie Avenue, now Stalina Avenue, Nowy Swiat and partly from Krakowskie Przedmiescie) streetcar communication was completely removed. Also the large artery of traffic on the Avenue Niepodleglosci is without streetcars.
215A	MPK *	K-6	Offices of the Municipal communication enterprise on First Armii Wojaka Polskiego Avenue (formerly Prasnica Avenue). The MPK has several wire offices around town from where not only the technical operation is supervised but also various kinds of seasonal tickets are on sale. The central board of MPK is still in its pre-World War II location on Mlynarska street.

216	Main Post Office	J-3	On Nowogrodzka Street in the pre-World War II building of the Telephone and Telegraph Central. This building was only slightly damaged during World War II and is completely rebuilt. There are plans to transfer the main post office to the former City Telephone Switchboard Central on Zielna Street. This building, the highest 'skyscraper' of pre-World War II Warsaw, was very badly damaged during World War II. It has not been rebuilt but has not been dismantled either.
216A	District telephone switchboard	K-4	On Tiekna Street in its pre-World War II location.
216B	Postal branch office *	K-1	On Szawska Street in the building of the State Planning Board.
216C	Postal branch office *	L-5	On the corner of Dworkowa and Pulawska Streets.
216D	Postal branch office *	L-6	On the corner of Flory and Bagatela Streets.
216E	District telephone switchboard *	K-3	At Dobra Wola Street (formerly Smutna Street).
216F	Postal branch office *	K-4	On Konstytucji Place.
217	Fire brigade station	K-5	The main city fire brigade station with garages and workshops on their pre-World War II location on Unia Place.
217A	Fire brigade (only on 1939 map)	K-2	Destroyed fire brigade post on Nowy Swiat, not rebuilt. A part of the Communist Party Headquarters building also covers this site.
218	Main water filtering station	F, G-3, 4	On its pre-World War II location. Through the eastern part of the station's terrain, the new super highway for heavy traffic crosses. This new super highway cuts right through the city of Warsaw connecting the industrial area in the south of the town (Sluzewice) with the northern industrial area (Mlodych).
218A	Offices of the water filtering station	G-3	On Starynkiewicz Street in their pre-World War II location.
219	Municipal gas works	M-2	On Ludna Street completely devastated during World War II and not rebuilt. The grounds have been incorporated in the Culture and Recreation Park. The large gas reservoirs are still on the place.
220	Market hall	J-4	On its pre-World War II seat on Koszykowa Street. Damaged during World War II and rebuilt meanwhile.
220A	Market hall *	D-1, 4, 5	Newly constructed in 1953 on Barska Street.
220B	Open market place * with booths	D-6	The so-called 'Zieleniak' on its pre-World War II location on Grojecka Street. Also on the same place is a well-known tavern which is open all night long. As many 'kulaks'

They can easily hear these over a glass of beer in the tavern which developed into a kind of special information center. Although the locality and the place are under permanent control of UB agents it is always possible to make contacts with farmers either in the tavern or by stopping outside around the mostly horse-drawn vehicles. The tavern enjoys a good reputation for its excellent food.
221	Gasoline station *	K-6	One of the main gasoline filling stations on Jula Place, also for private car holders.
222-224	?
225	Dzieciatka Jezus Hospital	G,H-3	Child Jesus Christ hospital, the largest municipally run hospital in town. Part of it is the university clinics between Ozki, Koszykowa and Nowogrodzka Streets. This hospital was very badly damaged in 1939, was rebuilt and again was partly destroyed in 1944-45. When it was rebuilt in its pre-world war II style with some modernizations and enlargements. The hospital stretches over Lindleya and Koszykowa Streets. Further renovations and modernizations all over the hospital are still under way.
225A	Pathological Institute	G,H-3	Part of the university.
225B	D. J. hospital *	G-3	Department of the hospital for orthopedic treatment. A new building under further expansion on Lindleya Street. It is worthwhile noticing that nearly every Polish hospital now has an orthopedic department.
225C	D. J. hospital branch *	G-3	On Ozki Street, a newly constructed department with 150 beds.
226	St. Lazars hospital	L-2	Hospital for Diseases and Venereal Diseases on Katowicka Street. It was completely destroyed during World War II and has not been rebuilt. The grounds are embodied in the Culture and Recreation Park area.
227	Social Insurance hospital for general illnesses *	X-8	A complete new construction on Madalinskiego Street with 180 beds especially for the newly erected residential Mokotow area.
228	Hospital for Children	K-5	On its pre-World War II location on Litowska Street. Rebuilt and modernized after it suffered World War II damages.
229	Maternity hospital	K-4	This former distinguished privately run maternity hospital on Marszalkowska Street is now under municipal administration. It has been left on its old location although the newly erected MDM apartment houses strangle it so much that it is rather dark and somber. However the lack of such hospitals necessitated leaving it there.

230	Institute for Deaf and Dumb People	L-2	Nearly completely destroyed [during World War II] and rebuilt on its pre-World War II site on Trzech Kryzy place. By the rebuilding of this institute the previous project of reconstruction of the Trzech Kryzy Place had to be modified. While it had been planned before to leave an open space for a perspective view of the Vistula, this projected terraced layout has to be moved farther south to the outlet of Wlajska Street where the latter touches on Trzech Kryzy Place.
231	Boardinghouse for children with mental disorders	J-4	On Nowowiejska Street (formerly Sixth Sierpnia Street) is the former institute for blind people.
232	First Aid Station *	J-3	On the corner of Fokuska and Hoza Streets.
233	Institute for Fighting against Tuberculosis *	E-6	On Pasterna Street in a newly constructed building.

234	[REDACTED]
235	'Mokotow' prison	J-7	Pre-World War II penitentiary prison on Mokotowska Street, now called the Warsaw 'Lubyanka'. In the 'Mokotow' a special prison has been organized now for political prisoners. Over 3,000 are imprisoned under such a charge, some of them with death or long terms. The rest have never been on trial. A large number of pre-war world war II politicians, members of the democratic political movements or underground army during World War II are held in 'Mokotow'. A considerable number of the with death sentences have been held for many years without execution of the judgment. It is quite an exception if anybody is released from the prison. The special methods of investigation applied in this prison follow the pattern of the 'Lubyanka'. Besides torture, the well-known Soviet demoralization and 'inducement' procedures are practiced.

Administration
240	SEJM	L,M-3	The Parliament in its pre-World War II location, rebuilt and reconstructed. (On the plan the building is outlined in its projected final shape.) [This is the reason why there is a difference in the shape on two maps.]
241	Rada Panstwa	L-5	On 1/3 Ujazdowskie Avenue, the State National Council which is the 'highest' governing institute. Organized along the pattern of all Communist-dominated countries behind the Iron Curtain. The offices are in the pre-World War II seat of the Army Inspectorate (in Pilsudski's times his headquarters). It is planned to later transfer the State National Council to the so-called 'Mazowiecki Palace', one of Warsaw's historical buildings which is now under reconstruction.

251	Ministry for Railway	H-3,4	On Four Chalubinskiego Street on its pre-World War II seat.
252	Ministry for Shipping	G-5	On 57 Filtrwa Street in the pre-World War II location of the southwestern district administration board.
253	Ministry for Defense	H-4	On Niepodleglosci Avenue in part of the pre-World War II military barracks in which an engineering officers' school had been located. Only part of the offices of the Defense Ministry are in this building. The others are dispersed all over town. In this military block, there is an engineering general staff school and in addition it contains the apartment houses for high ranking officers. Many buildings on this lot were constructed after World War II. The monument, characteristic of this area representing a 'Pioneer', was destroyed during the German occupation and was not rebuilt.

490	MDM *	J,K,L-2,3,4,5,6	The largest residential area now nearing completion on both sides of Marszalkowska Street. This new so-called 'socialist' residential district is built following the outlines of Moscow architecture. It must, however, be stated that Polish architects applied sufficient modifications from the prescribed designs so that the outcome is quite pleasant. It is planned to accommodate 45,000 inhabitants in this main residential district of Warsaw.
491	WSM-Mokotow *	H,J-8,9	A settlement in the Mokotow district nearly completed where 12,000 inhabitants will reside. The settlement is situated in the rectangle between Miedoleglosci Avenue, Madalinskiego, Wolowska and Wiktorska Streets. Small streets that existed here before World War II were remodeled and the entire settlement (started in 1949) is one of the most modern in Warsaw. The northern part of it is occupied by military personnel apartment houses.
492	Mokotow Settlement *	J,K,L-8,9	On the 20 hectares of land between Wiktorska, Al. Niepodleglosci, Ursynowska and Pulawska Streets. They anticipate housing 8,500 inhabitants here. Construction of the settlement was started in 1953.
493	Sielce Settlement *	M,N-7,8	Between Polwederska, Chelmska, Zakrzewska and Nowoprojektowana Streets. This settlement for 6,500 inhabitants is already partly inhabited, mostly by high ranking Party dignitaries and functionaries. Preference was given to this residential area by this category of residents because it is a picturesque spot surrounded on all sides by park installations.
494	Ochota I-Settlement *	C,D,E-4,5,6	The settlement covers around 40 hectares of land between Grojecka, Kopinska, Szczesliwicka and Nowoopaczewska Streets. Already 20,000 inhabitants out of the foreseen number of 30,000 are living here. In 1955 the construction of the neighboring Ochota II settlement will be started west of Ochota I.
495	Okecie Settlement *	A,B-11,12	On 24 hectares of land in the southwestern outskirts of the city: provided for 5,600 people, mostly workers who will be employed in the Okecie industrial district (airplane industry).
